

Japanese Global Strategic Cross-Holdings

Material foreign equity interests held by Japanese corporates

Cut-off: 17 August 2026 | Listed holding-value threshold: >US$100m

Executive summary

This screen identifies 52 current foreign-listed positions with estimated Japanese-holder value above US$100m, plus 9 selected private / unlisted strategic positions. The measured listed positions sum to approximately US$432.0bn, but that aggregate should not be interpreted as a single investable NAV: market-data dates differ by exchange, some positions are controlled subsidiaries, and SoftBank's T-Mobile line uses the holder's reported gross equity value rather than a clean current ownership percentage.

The largest measurable position is SoftBank's 86.4% beneficial interest in Arm, worth roughly US$222.9bn at the retained market observation. Japanese megabanks are the broadest repeatable source of overseas strategic listed stakes: MUFG and SMFG together hold material positions across the U.S., India and Southeast Asia. Life insurers are another unusually dense cluster, including Dai-ichi, Meiji Yasuda, Nippon Life, Sumitomo Life and Japan Post.

The table deliberately distinguishes economic ownership, voting/control rights, controlled foreign listed subsidiaries, indirect JV look-through interests, and derivative/financing-sensitive exposures rather than treating every percentage as ordinary voting common stock.

- Priority clients. The spreadsheet includes a separate screen for every client name transcribed from the supplied screenshot.
- Liquidity. ADTV is estimated as local share price × 20-day average volume × FX. It is a cash-equity liquidity indicator, not block monetization capacity.
- Price performance. LTM is populated where a reliable 52-week price-change statistic was retained. L3M is intentionally blank where a comparable three-month reference price was not reliably recovered; no values are invented.
- Private holdings. Private-company values are shown only as transaction/investment proxies where defensible. A historical purchase price is not presented as current fair value.

Scope and methodology

The working definition follows the earlier Korean cross-holdings framework: a Japanese corporate or Japanese-controlled group holds a material equity or equity-like interest in a non-Japanese company. Reciprocal ownership is not required. The public-company core uses a >US$100m estimated holding-value threshold.

For listed targets, the default valuation is:

$$\text{Holding value} = \text{Target equity market capitalization} \times \text{Japanese holder economic stake.}$$

Where an exact share count is more defensible, the report instead uses:

$$\text{Holding value} = \text{Shares held} \times \text{share price.}$$

All local-currency market values are translated into USD using 14 August 2026 FX assumptions in the workbook. Market prices and ownership dates are shown row by row because a single synchronized global close is not available across all exchanges and filing regimes.

- Controlled foreign listed subsidiaries are included and tagged separately.
- Ordinary 100%-owned overseas operating subsidiaries are excluded from the narrow listed core.
- Fiduciary / client asset-management portfolios are excluded unless there is a strategic proprietary balance-sheet relationship.
- SoftBank Vision Fund portfolio holdings are not treated wholesale as SBG corporate crossholdings. Direct/strategic SBG holdings and selected especially material private positions are separated.
- Economic and voting stakes are both shown where they differ. This is important for Japan Post–Aflac and Nippon Steel–Usiminas.
- SoftBank–T-Mobile is treated as a special economic-exposure line because asset-backed financing and other structures make a stale raw share percentage misleading.

Important structural cases

SoftBank–Arm. Arm’s FY2026 filing states that SoftBank beneficially owned approximately 922.7m shares, or 86.4% of issued share capital, as of 21 May 2026. This is a controlled foreign listed subsidiary, not merely a passive minority position.

SoftBank–Intel. Intel issued 86,956,522 shares to SoftBank for US$2.0bn in September 2025. SoftBank continued to identify Intel as a portfolio investment in its 2026 materials. At the retained July market price, that exact share block was worth almost US$8bn.

MUFG and SMFG. These groups create a large bank/broker strategic-equity network. MUFG’s major positions include Morgan Stanley and partner banks in Thailand, Indonesia, Vietnam, the Philippines and India. SMFG’s current group-company disclosure lists ACLEDA, VPBank, YES BANK and RCBC, while Jefferies’ May 2026 filing states SMBC owned 17.2% on a fully diluted basis.

Japan Post–Aflac. A March 2026 Schedule 13G reported 52.28m Aflac shares, equal to 10.12% of the common class at that date. Separately, the strategic alliance trust structure is treated as 20% voting rights subject to contractual voting restrictions. The report therefore does not collapse the relationship into a single percentage.

Nippon Steel–Usiminas. Economic ownership across share classes and voting influence in ordinary shares differ, so both percentages are shown.

Coverage gaps and interpretation

There is no single regulator that provides a complete same-date global ownership graph for Japanese corporates. The screen combines Japanese annual/securities reports, U.S. SEC filings, exchange shareholder lists, company investor-relations disclosures and market-data sources. Disclosure thresholds, beneficial-ownership concepts and update frequencies differ materially across jurisdictions.

A “No qualifying position identified” result should therefore be read as a negative public-source screen under this methodology, not as a legal conclusion that the Japanese client owns no foreign securities whatsoever. This is especially important for trading houses, insurers and financial institutions with numerous unconsolidated affiliates or investment vehicles.

For client work, the most actionable rows are not automatically the largest. A block’s practical monetization depends on free float, strategic-shareholder agreements, lockups, takeover rules, foreign ownership limits, tax, hedging availability and daily liquidity. The Excel workbook therefore keeps stake structure, ADTV, priority-client status and source links visible together.

Reproducibility note

The accompanying Excel workbook is the calculation master. Local market capitalization, price, average volume, ownership percentage and exact share counts are hard-coded inputs; FX is stored on a separate assumptions sheet; USD market cap, holding value and ADTV are formula-derived. Each listed row carries separate ownership and market-data URLs, and medium-confidence cases are explicitly flagged.
